

Coming home to The Never Dying Field of Love: What it really means to walk within your heart

Here I am, an earthly aspect riding along the waves on this earthly plane. For most of my life I have been identified with a false reality. I have limited my possibilities by deceiving myself - thinking that I am no more than a body and a mind. This troubled mind has created a self-image, my personality, my life situation – my ego – “me”.

Discovering that I am more than what I have led myself to believe takes me on to a new path of discoveries. I discover that who I really am goes far beyond my body and my mind. The short-lived entity that I believed in discovers that behind all content lies a super-intelligent field observing me, watching me and in the end – giving birth to the experience that I mistakenly thought was all I ever were. I am infinite. I have always existed and for the rest of eternity - I will forever be. Now I know that the forever vibrating - never dying - pure energy-field of Love is always there, carrying the seed that I am planting, as a human, all over this earthly plane.

Knowing this liberating truth of my existence - still here I am, an earthly aspect riding along the waves in this earthly plane. I still have attachments. Still I have things that I carry around as baggage. For every step that I take I carry less, but I am still walking with my attachments, some of them of great importance - to make me fit in to the level of existence I've chosen to experience at this time. No matter the attachments I can still express my full potential as a co-creator of this universe. It all comes down to the quality of my attention and the state of my awareness. Awakening to my greater being gives me the opportunity to bring back all of me to the state of balance where I no longer, through my body-computer, express who I am in an un-conscious state. To find balance in this state of perception it is essential to know that I am still fully experiencing duality. The fact that something can be out of balance gives birth to what we call balance. When I experience imbalance I am not balanced. When I experience balance I am not imbalanced. To be balanced in these lower domains one must bring both sides of polarity to the state where all aspects are expressed consciously and where neither one of them is dominating the other. One must bring them to a state where the different aspects are not lost - but truly found and taken care of. I call this state to be at home. To truly be at home within my heart I must bring all my aspects back home to where they came from – to the field of love. Here they will all see that they are forever loved and can then finally merge together with the rest of me, to forever vibrate the never dying field of love. Only in this field of love can I truly merge together with my other half. Here we can meet and truly become the one being of unconditional loving service to humanity and the cosmos.

When I know of true unconditional love I will use my vehicle from a state that will always be in love with all that is. Here I will create from the heart and whenever I am using my mind and thoughts they will appear straight from my loving heart. I will experience deep peace and my soul can truly enter to fully transform my inner self. Rather than having one eye on the goal and one eye on the path I shall have both eyes on my path - knowing my goal within my heart. I do long for the day of my Ascension - my graduation - but to fully graduate I must now heal all my aspects and lower dimensions of myself to bring it all home with me. Here I am, ready to bring myself home as heaven is brought to earth. I am now walking within my heart, right here, in this earthly plane.

With Love – That I Am – Henrik Sandberg

www.FieldOfLove.com