

The Quiet Revolution, a journey to a new state of Wake-FULL-Ness ~ by Leone Kennedy, Sister of Avalon, Guardian of the Truth, Child of the Divine

The quiet revolutions are the most difficult to serve. They ask us to dig deep and trust, trust the silence, trust the unknown and most of all trust ourselves. There are many of us living here on earth at this time who feel this quiet revolution, we know we are here to serve and honour this great time of transformation and renewal and for the most part we feel blind folded as we seek and search for answers to questions that we know we already know.

I cannot speak for you, however I hope that what follows empowers you to trust and discern what your heart and spirit already knows.

From an early age (I'm a 68 child) I enquired and felt a deep enchantment to my spirit. I always knew there was much more to the me that I saw in the mirror. I had very little understanding, but I knew I was more, not less. I also had a strange detachment to the system from an early age, this included school, and the day to dayness of life on earth. For the most part whilst I had friends, family and fun around me I felt detached and alone. Not lonely but alone. School was a way for me to reconnect with people, people I know I already knew from other lives and other times. I lived with this knowing in silence until 2005 when it all started to make sense to me. Before 2005 there were signs and new levels of understanding; however it was in 2005 that the penny dropped. I started to recognize and reconnect with what I call my real family, and through this process (a process that is still on-going) I started to know myself more and more. I started to discern and filter what was truly me and what was a fragment of the me that is still plugged into the matrix. So it is fair to say that right now I am living two lives, the life of the long lost me and the life of the plugged in me. I love both unconditionally. I need both to complete this journey and return home to the Divine.

What lies dormant within me empowers and scares me greatly. I hold inside me an incredible amount of power and for most of my life it has been misdirected and misunderstood. The matrix has a way of showing us two things, it will show us what we are not, and it will show us what we should become. It took me a while to ignore that illusion. My inner spiritual mechanics has been hard wired to be and live a particular energetic resonance and for most of my life I have been waiting for the playing field to be right or ready or perfect. Well guess what, the playing field will never be so, I was actually waiting for myself. I am grateful that I had the courage to make the wait fun, colourful and eventful!! Now I hold within me the courage to cease the wait and put my hard wiring to good use. Yes it is true that the vibration of our planet has undergone and continues to undergo colossal change in preparation for the coming renewal, and divine timing plays an integral part as we move about the chess board of life. I have come to know for myself that if I wait for the perfect time to make the great leap I will miss out on the small opportunities to enjoy the small leaps of faith, the leaps you take when no one is watching. The great leap is inevitable. The small leaps are the ones we create building the bridge to unity, balance and one-ness.

You know when you just know? You know that feeling? If you are reading this then I know you know what I mean. Well, get used to that feeling because where we are going there will be a lot more of that and each knowing is significant. Each knowing you receive is your divine self trying to get your attention and if there is nothing else you do with your day but listen to that knowing then congratulations and thank you because by listening to that knowing and following it you have served yourself, me and humanity in more ways than you can possibly imagine. When you know you know, it is natural to trust it and say yes to it.

We are paving the way forward to a place where knowing, unconditional love and complete & open connection to the Divine will be normal and natural. So start to get ready now, remember, small leaps will build the bridge. Each of us is spiritually hard wired with a resonance that knows what it knows, it is this knowing that will set us free. Oh the Freedom! I can feel it and see it now.

Thank you for reading this piece, there is vast greatness inside each of us. We are here now to go beyond, we do not need help, we only need faith.

Love and Strength

Leone